Art Unit: 2132

Applicant first argued that Wookey teaches away from the invention because in one embodiment the user name may be installed during master monitor installation. The examiner respectfully disagrees, noting that the language clearly distinguishes that embodiments in which the user name is not installed are also contemplated. If the user name is not installed, it must be transmitted to the monitor (i.e. received).

Regarding Applicant's arguments that Wookey "does not teach or suggest significant benefits that the present invention provides", the examiner notes that the examination of the claims is constrained by the claim language presented. Although the claims are interpreted in light of the specification, limitations from the specification are not read into the claims.
